Directions: Good manners show consideration and respect for others. Describe what should be done in the following mealtime situations.

1. You don't know when to begin eating when others are eating with you.

2. You drop your napkin on the floor while eating.

3. The food you are served is too hot to eat.

4. You want the sauce that is across the table from you.

5. The piece of meat you are served is larger than you can eat.

6. You are eating fish and find a bone in your mouth.

7. You need to sneeze during a meal.

8. You accidentally knock over a glass of water onto the lap of the person sitting next to you.

9. You are eating at a friend's house and the main dish is something you don't like.

10. You are asked a question just as you put a bite of food in your mouth.

11. You are served an unfamiliar food that you don't know how to eat properly.

12. You have a long coughing spell while eating.

13. Your napkin keeps sliding off your lap.

14. You are attending a banquet in a formal restaurant and broiled chicken is served.

15. There are three forks and two spoons at your place. You don't know what to use them for.

Food for Thought: Why should good manners be practiced as part of everyday living?
