Ways To Volunteer

A few ways you can get involved right now:

Suggest A Video!

If you have run across a video that fits the KarmaTube platform, tell us about it! Most of our featured videos get several thousand views, and some have even crossed 100K views! To submit a video click here.

Create Videos:

If you are a film-maker or an aspiring film maker interested in creating uplifting videos, join our team of video-making volunteers.

Write Content:

If you've got writing skills and a socially conscious mindset, you might be a perfect fit to help us write video descriptions and "be-the-change" actions for each of our featured videos. Send us a short bio about your background, and we'll get back to you shortly.

Spread the Word:

We believe in the power of spreading ideas through word-of-mouth: it's a path that's lasting and authentic. If any ideas presented on this site inspire you, multiply that inspiration by sharing it with others. You can also follow us on social media.

To volunteer or if you'd like to offer other skills not listed here, please drop us a note! We'd love to hear from you.

Carl Cheng: The John Doe Company

I didn't go to school to study art to become a cottage industry. You're allowed to take any courses offered. I took classes in zoology and physics and other subjects. To be able to take anything you want, as an artist, is amazing. I was walking in the shop area at UCLA and saw students designing the inside of an airplane. I enrolled in Industrial design immediately and got out of painting: "I was truck, and he dropped us off at two in the morning in the Haight Ashbury."

Koan: A Conversation with Vaea Marx

Hamada, Yanagi, Kawai Kanjiro; I studied with Kawai Kanjiro. I knew all those people. In fact, I even met the filmmaker, Kurosawa, before he was known here. I traveled all over in Japan with Kawai. Bernard Leach came over; I met him there, too.

Art of Engagement

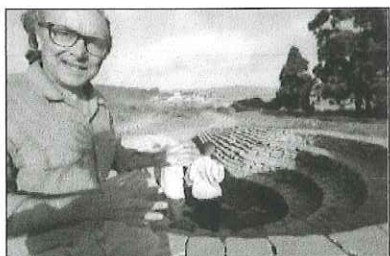

Monday, Sep 26, 2011

Why are the arts so often considered frills when it comes to what is needed in schools, in politics, in so many parts of life? The capacity for creative response is needed in all walks of life. In this issue we explore art as a tool for social engagement. Read More

Sharing the Wealth

Friday, June 27, 2011

It's been my good fortune to have more than my share of remarkable friends, and several of them appear in this issue of the newsletter. One of the joys of having a venue like this newsletter is that it's a vehicle for expanding my own circle. Read More

Carlo Ferretti's Cove

"In the end, I was able to obtain almost everything I strive for: respect for the site and the materials, simplicity, strength, dignity, anonymity, the primitive, the commonplace, the vernacular, the obvious, the unnoticeable, the apparently useful, the unfashionable and, most of all, the creation

I was bicycling past the Berkeley marina one day, when I was surprised to see piece of public art unlike any I'd ever seen, a warrior-archer astride a mythical beast that looked something like a oversized Chinese foo-dog. At its foot was a bronze plaque with the sculptor's name. I googled it
