

The Piano Man

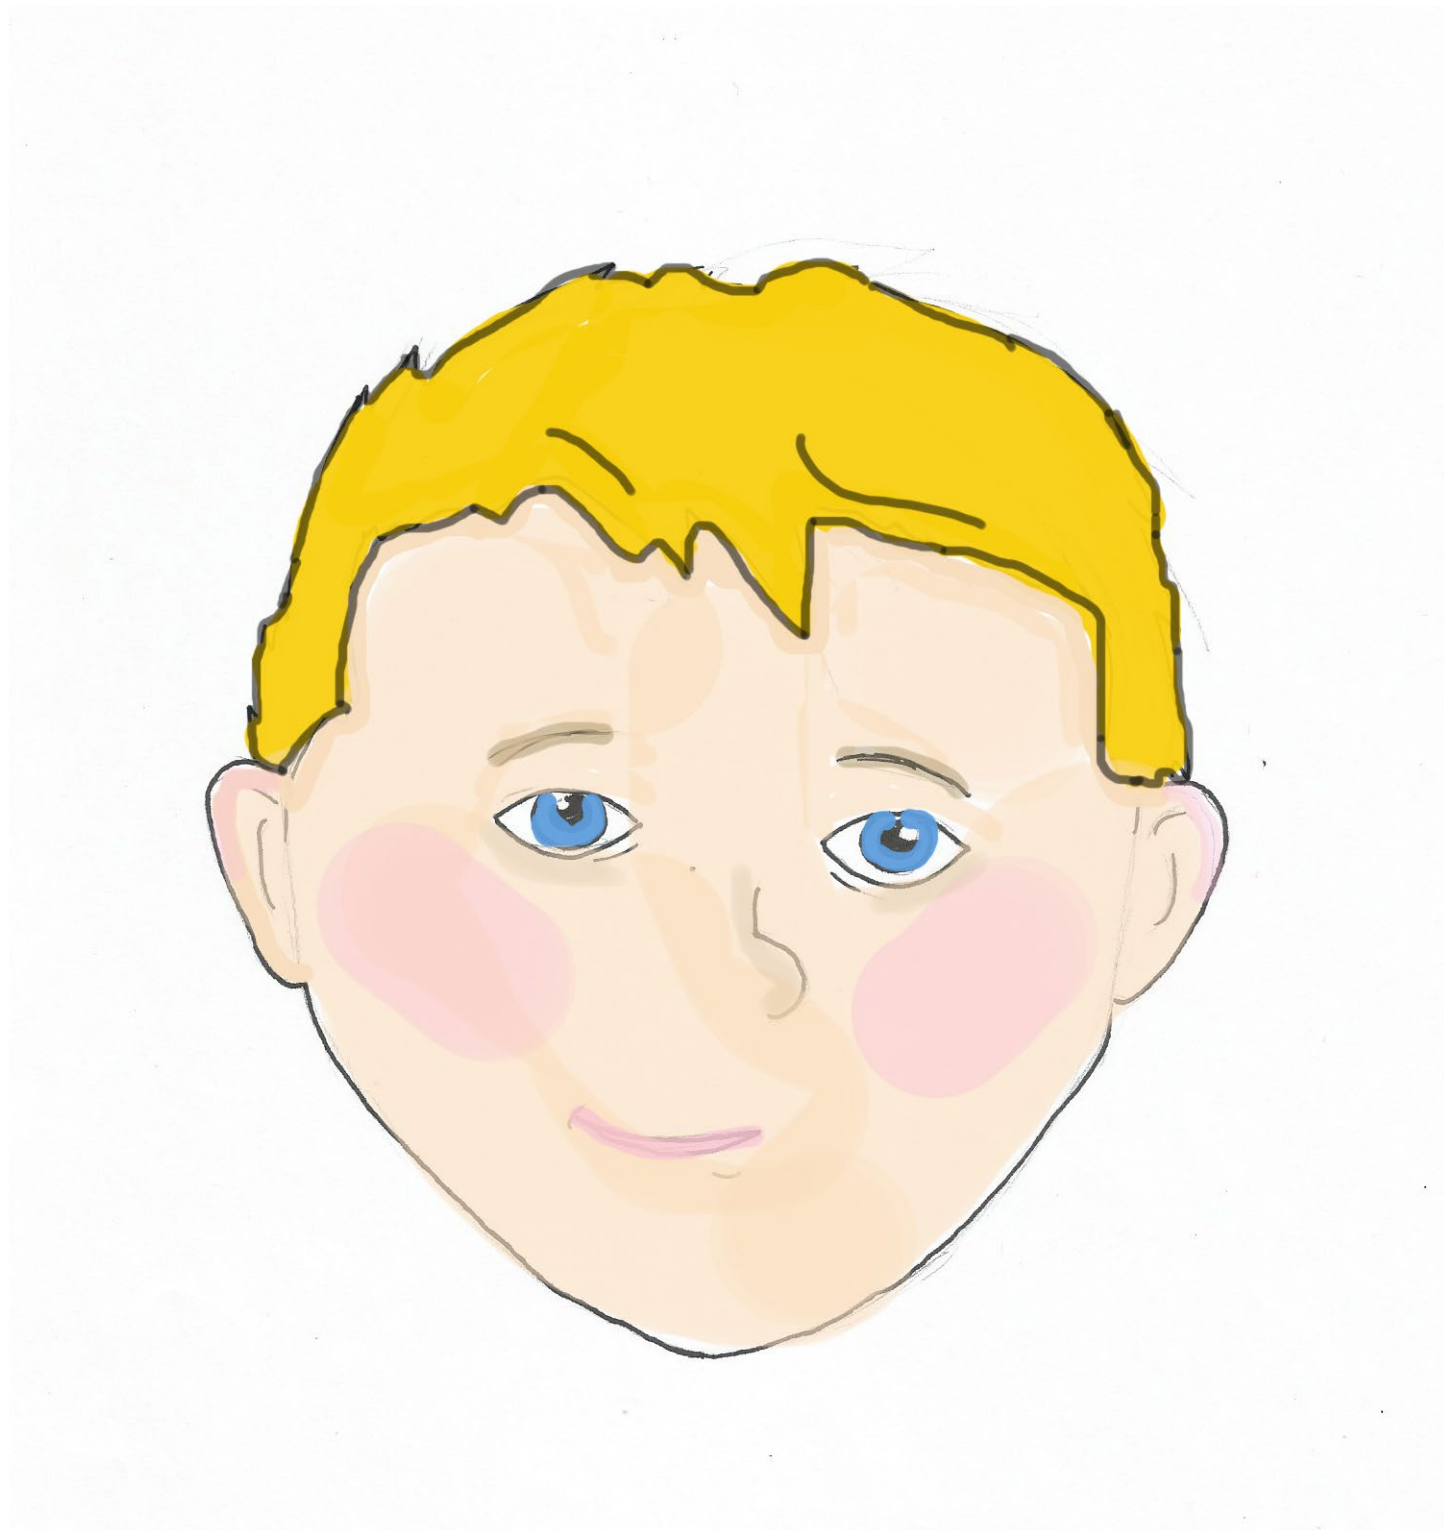

By Mason Robison
Illustrated By Logan Christensen.

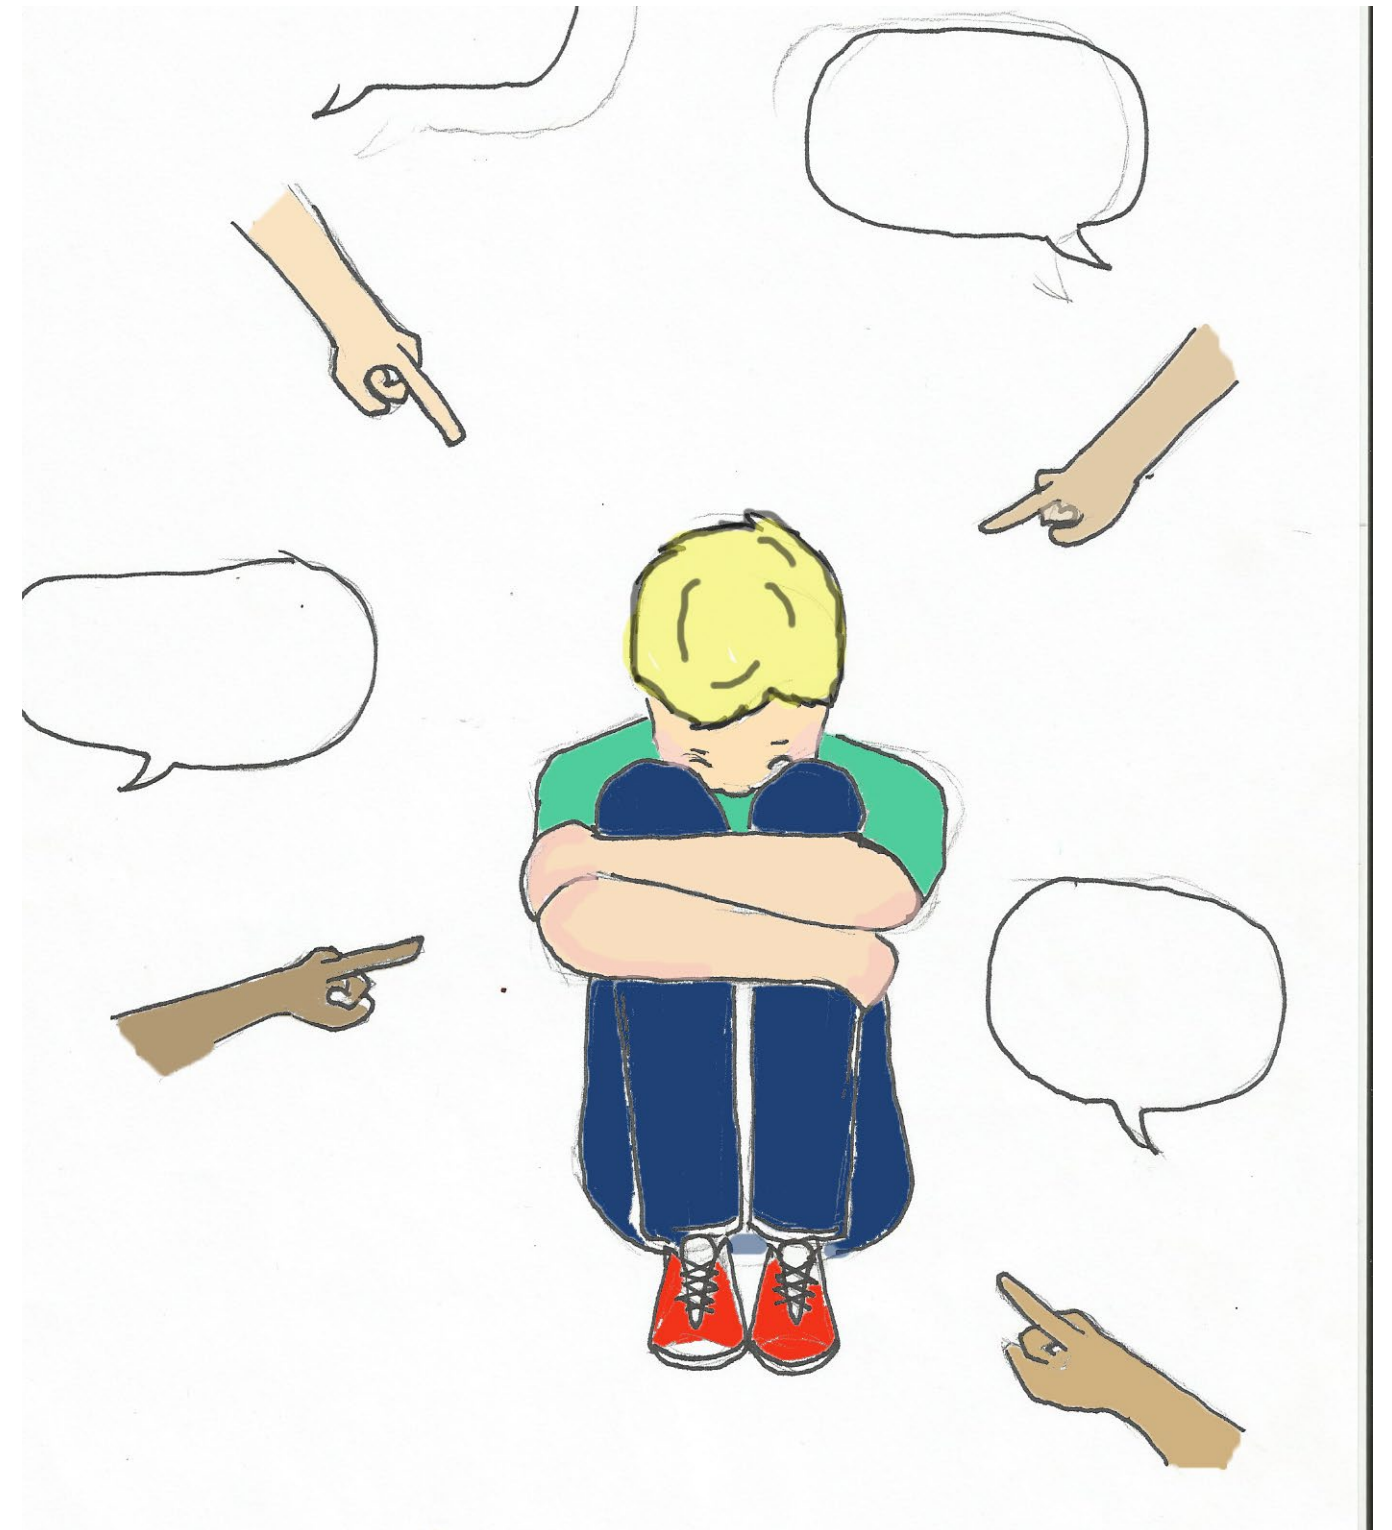

Once upon a time in a small town in Maine lived a small boy.

Now this boy was like every other boy. He played the same, he ate the same, and he talked the same.

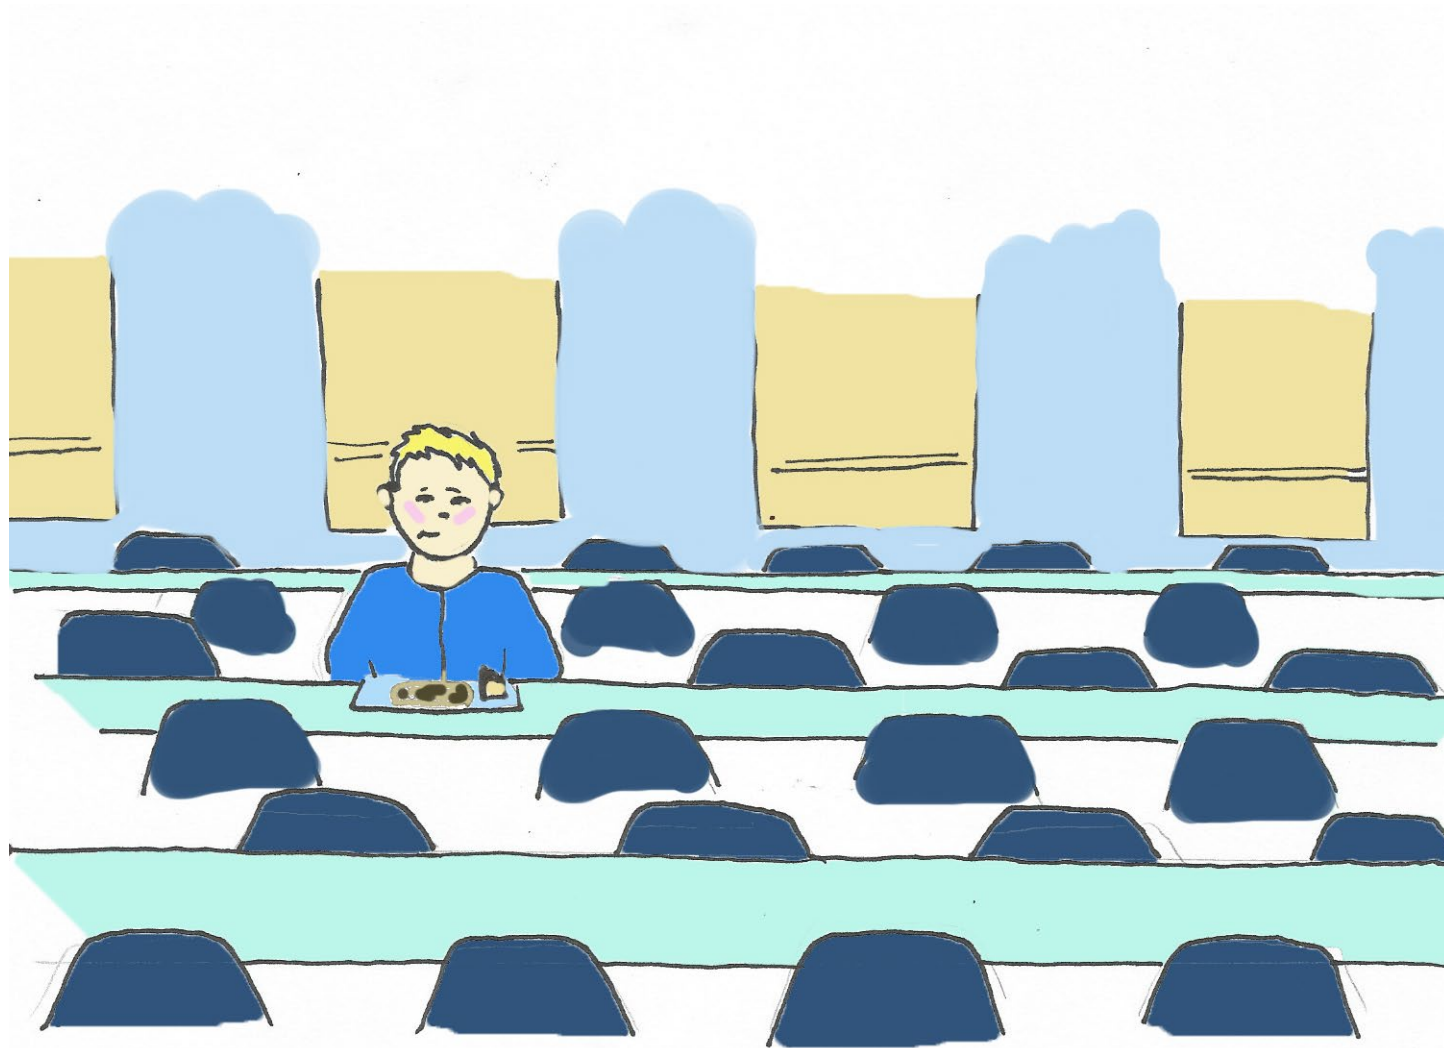

There was only one small difference between him and the other boys. He was blind. This boy was brilliant. he could have done anything in hte world he wanted to.

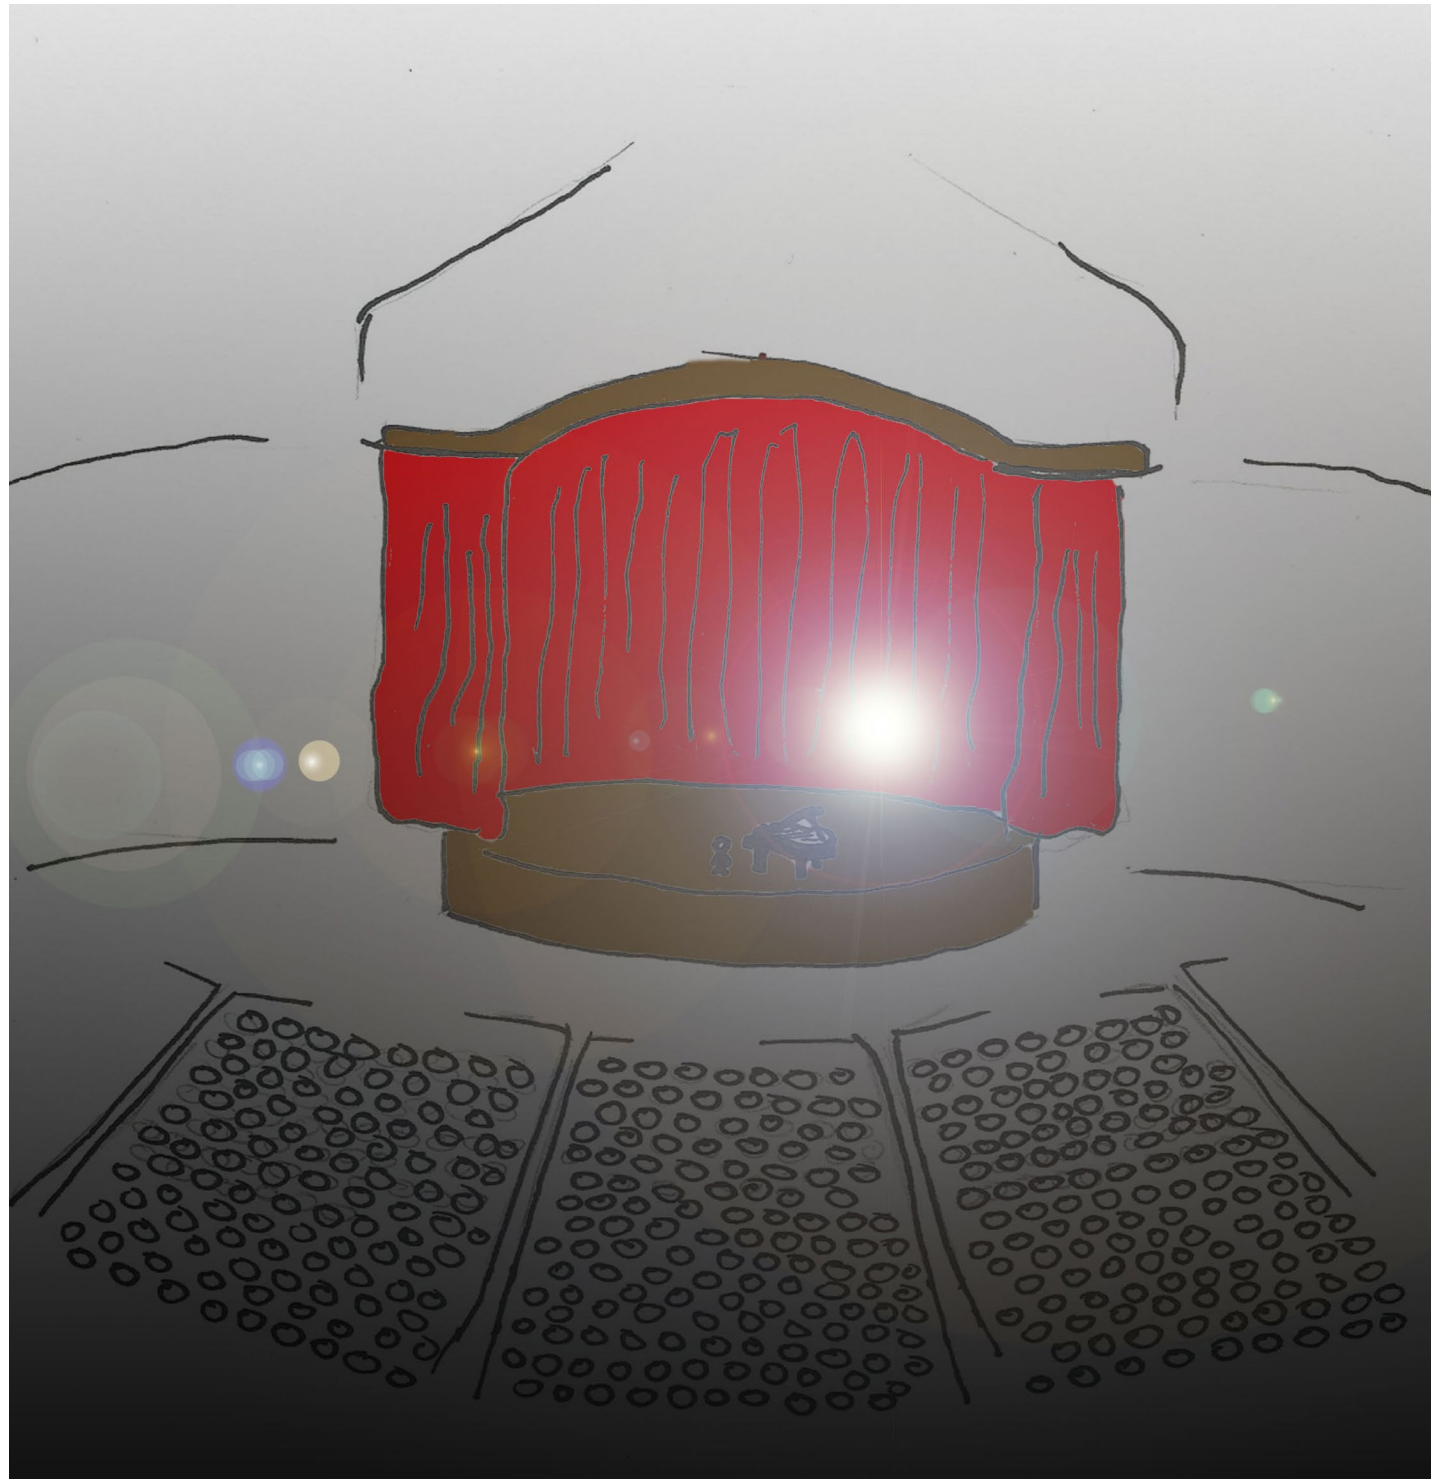

He was teased and shunned because he was different than all of the other children.

His parents encouraged him and he worked hard to learn the basics. He found that playing the piano not only brought joy to him but to others around him.

On the first day of school they noticed he was different and from that day forward his life was miserable. Do you know what he did? He learned how to play the piano and practiced and practiced.

He became one of the best piano players in the state. In fact, he became one of the best piano players in the world. He performed in some of the most famous concert halls on the planet.

And they said he couldn't accomplish anything. That goes to show how much they know.

Mason Robison is an 8th grade student at Dixon Middle School. He enjoys choir and playing basketball. This is his first picture book.

Logan Christensen is an 8th grade student at Dixon Middle School. He enjoys art, playing basketball, and playing the piano. This is his first picture book.