Examples of Hospitality, Tourism, and Recreation Projects:

“My project focused on creating an outline of a Hospitality business. I chose to focus on a culinary based business, in particular a bakery. Because I want to open up my own bakery after college, I made my business as realistic as possible. In my portfolio I displayed my menu, prices, and other important factors that I would consider for opening up a bakery.” Oregon FCCLA Member

“The basis of my project was to create a website that could easily be navigated by potential clients as well as giving lists of employee positions in the field of which I chose. Along with research of three other establishments related to mine. The ones I chose being Spaghetti Warehouse, Olive Garden, and Carrabba’s.” Pennsylvania FCCLA Member

“We have been creating a café that not only provides amazing food but welcomes talent from across the low-country. It is our goal to set a casual atmosphere that serves delicious and affordable food for the young adults in the area, while also allowing them to showcase their talents.” South Carolina FCCLA Member

“Lex Vegas Tours was inspired out of curiosity for our hometown, Lexington, Virginia. Focusing on the tourism element, we created a business that would bring multiple types of target clients into the city. Our project consists of three tour packages: historical, artisan, and leisure based. Sightseeing would take place at prearranged locations and would spark the same interest in the tourists that we had previously seen. Full of knowledge and excitement, members of the community and possible consumers would be drawn into Lexington, where Lex Vegas Tours would provide the most appealing services to showcase our local aspects.” Virginia FCCLA Member
