Examples of Promote and Publicize FCCLA! Projects:

“The FCCLA’s Public Relations committee distributed a survey to adults to find out how we publicize the work of our chapter. The FCCLA’s Public Relations committee has used Twitter, articles in our local newspaper and our school newsletter about the Fall Leadership conference, the handwashing program for preschool and Kindergarteners, and FCCLA’s distracted driving lessons. We also decorated a bulletin board for our board office to promote FCCLA, made FCCLA brochures and passed them out at a middle school home game.” Kansas FCCLA Members

“During the course of our project, we went to different schools and volunteered at lunch to talk to other students about FCCLA. We presented information during classes to inform students about what we do in FCCLA. As a group we made a goal to get more people to join, and we are happy to say that we have accomplished our goal.” Kentucky FCCLA Members

“My project is set up to recognize everything my chapter does in our school and community. My goal through this project is to make others aware of the importance of FCCLA and Family and Consumer Sciences education. My project includes events, activities, charities and so much more in the many ways our FCCLA chapter reaches out. This project portrays our many ways and ideas to make our school and community better.” Missouri FCCLA Member

“For our project we held different events, fundraisers, and spread the word about FCCLA. Since this is only our second year of having FCCLA at our school, we are still mainly focusing on expanding. We have been working all year to get more people familiarized with FCCLA and what it stands for.” North Carolina FCCLA Member
