

MY PERFECT PERSONALITY PIE

Concept

Personalities are like a pie; it takes many pieces and ingredients to make a whole pie.

Activity

Explain to the students that one of the most important ingredients for success in relationships, achievements, and happiness is one's personality. One's personality is another part of the magic that makes things happen with little effort.

Using the overhead transparency that lists personality traits and characteristics, have the students choose the traits they think make up the perfect personality or the personality he/she would like to have. The teacher may need to briefly review some of the traits. Have each student choose up to ten (10) traits to complete his/her pie.

When the students have made their selections, they can write their personality traits in the outer circle around the edge of their pies. If they think one trait is a lot more important than another, that trait can take up two parts of the pie. Using colored pencils or felt-tip markers, let the students color in their pie sections.

As the students complete the activity, explain how personalities are similar to a pie—one or two pieces (personality traits) do not make a complete pie (complete personality), but when there are many pieces (personality traits), the pie is complete (and the personality is more enjoyable).

The teacher may have the students explain why they chose each personality trait around the edge of the pie.

NOTE: the teacher should have an example of a Personality Pie ready to show to the students before they begin.
