Instructional Procedures
Introduction to Healthy and Unhealthy Teen Relationships
Introduce the unit, disclose that this could be a touchy subject for many and respect is key.
Establish the ground rules for this type of unit (you may already have these established in your classroom, but it is a good reinforcement):
- Everyone has the right to participate
- Respect all opinions.
- All questions are welcome.
- Do not interrupt each other, only one person should talk at a time.
- Listen to each other.
- Talk about your own stories and not about others in the group.
- Personal stories stay in the room.
- Respect each other’s feelings.
- No put-downs or insults like making fun or laughing.

Divide your class into seven groups, this well designate which presentation they will be working on.
Distribute the “Healthy Relationship Presentations” handout, one to each group.
Review the guidelines and field any questions regarding the project. This can be a brainstorming or researched if the students have ready internet access.
Give each group 15-20 minutes to create a poster.
Meet back together and allow each group about 5 minutes to present their question.
Welcome feedback and questions from the rest of the class.

Video “Causing Pain: Real Stories of Dating Abuse and Violence”
13-minute video about true stories of youth who have been in or witnessed abusive
Let students know that the characters in the video describe their experiences so you can recognize and prevent dating abuse in your relationships or in the relationships of your friends.
